Bugs Bunny, Porky Pig, and Elmer Fudd were holding a secret conference behind closed doors in Elmer's living room.

"Oh, boy!" exclaimed Bugs. "We're sure gonna get a lot of dough!"

"Maybe," said Porky skeptically. "If our plans go off all right, and if we find it!"

"Don't worry!" Bugs told him. "We'll find it! But even if we don't, what can we lose?"

Elmer drummed on the arm of his chair and looked thoughtful. "Plenty!" he said. "And I have a stwong feeling I'm being wooked."

"Rooked?" asked Bugs. "How?"

"Well," answered Elmer. "It stwikes me that if I furnish twansportation, You ought to help pay for the gas! Wight?"

"A fine attitudel!" yelled Bugs indignantly. "Squawking about a couple o' bucks when I'M tellin' you how you can make fifty — or even a HUNDRED!"

At that moment, a distinct "Ker-CHOOO" was heard on the other side of the closed door.

"Oh-oh!" whispered Bugs. "Bet I know who THAT is! Keep talkin' — I'll surprise him!"

Elmer and Porky talked fast and loud while Bugs tiptoed across the room. When he reached the door, he jerked it open.

"Aha!" cried Bugs. "Just as I thought! Little Keyhole Cicero!"

Cicero, kneeling on the floor, looked up at Bugs with an expression of surprise — and guilt.

"Oh, Hello, Bugs," said the little pig. "What are you doing here?"

"ME! What are you doing here?" snorted Bugs crossly, yanking Cicero to his feet and pulling him into the room. "Here's our spy, fellows," he said to Elmer and Porky.

"What'll we do with him?"

"Shoot him!" suggested Porky.

"That's wight!" agreed Elmer, "Wub him out!"

"Huh!" sneered Cicero. "You can't scare me! And you can't go on that trip you're planning without me, either! Just try!"

"Listen to him," said Bugs. "He thinks he's going with us! Come on! We'll take him home to Petunia for safekeeping!"

They headed for the door, while their little spy kicked, wriggled, and yelled. But Bugs shoved him into Porky's car, and pretty soon they were speeding away into the night. A few minutes later, they arrived at Petunia's.

"We caught this little spy at Elmer's house," said Bugs. "We have important business to attend to tomorrow, and we don't want him tagging along. Keep an eye on him, will you?"

"Don't worry," answered Petunia. "I WILL!"

The last they saw of their little spy, he was being led up the stairs to bed, and the next morning before daylight, Elmer, Bugs, and Porky headed down the highway in Elmer's station wagon.

"At last!" said Bugs, with a sigh of relief. "We're on our way!"

"Yes," grinned Porky, "and without the little pest!"

"We can breathe freely," Elmer added. "The day is ours."

It was daylight by the time Elmer stopped the car at a wharf on the river.

"Sure you got gas in your motorboat, Elmer?" asked Bugs.

"Certainly," answered Elmer. "The boat's all ready to go."

"Okay," said Bugs. "Let's check our supplies to see if we forgot anything."

"Flashlight!" called Porky.

"Lunch basket!" called Elmer.

"ME!" called a strange muffled voice from the rear of the station wagon.

Bugs, Elmer, and Porky jumped.

"CICERO!" they chorused, sprinting to the rear of the car.

"Correct!" grinned Cicero, crawling out of the back seat where he had been hiding.

Bugs clasped his head in anguish. "Now our day's RUINED!" he groaned.

"No, it isn't," said Cicero. "Because I'm going to find that brief case, and we'll split the reward! I'll be a big help!"

"Huh?" Bugs gaped in surprise. "How did YOU know about the brief case?"

"I found THIS on the table in Elmer's living room," said Cicero, holding up a newspaper ad. "It says, 'Lost, a brief case containing very valuable papers, in Amusement Park on Parkway Island. Finder contact G. P. Afterum, Private Investigator, 602 Fourth Street. Reward.'" Pocketing the ad, Cicero continued, "So I thought you'd need help finding it!"

"And we thought we were being so secretive," grumbled Bugs.

"But what about Petunia?" Porky asked Cicero. "Won't she be worried about you?"

"No!" Cicero assured him. "I left her a note!"

"Well," sighed Elmer. "I guess there's nothing we can do but take him with us! Let's get into the boat and shove off!"

Half an hour later, they putt-putted up to the shore of Parkway Island.

"Jeepers!" exclaimed Bugs, as they piled out of the boat. "The park sure looks dead this early in the morning!"

"It'll look dead all day," remarked Porky. "Yesterday was the end of the summer season!"

"That's great!" exclaimed Bugs. "It'll be easier for us to hunt for the brief case! Come on! Time's a-wastin'!"

They searched all morning, then stopped at noon to eat their picnic lunch. After lunch, they started again, but after several hours they suddenly discovered that they had LOST CICERO. Frightened, Bugs, Porky, and Elmer ran all over the park looking for him.

but by sundown, Cicero was still missing.

"Let's get the police!" suggested Bugs. "We'll NEVER find him by ourselves!"

They headed for the boat on the run, but when they came in sight of it, they almost keeled over with surprise. Sitting in the boat, as calm as could be, was Cicero.

"CICERO!" yelled Bugs. "We thought you were lost! We've been looking everywhere for you!"

"I WAS lost!" answered Cicero. "I was hunting for you, too, but when I couldn't find you, I knew you'd find me if I waited in the boat! And you did!"

"Twue!" agreed Elmer. "And we're GLAD we found you — but you've kept us from finding the brief case!"

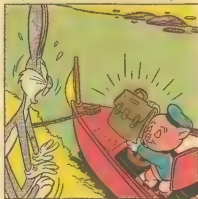

"I know," said Cicero. "You couldn't have found it, 'cause I did! See?" And to their utter astonishment, he held up the missing brief case.

"But how? Where?" asked Bugs.

"In the Tunnel of Love," giggled Cicero. "I saw a movie once where a private eye chased some people through the Tunnel of Love, so I thought I'd give it a try myself! I walked through the tunnel and stumbled over the brief case!"

"Boy! You're some SPY, all right!" grinned Bugs. "But for THIS kind of spyin', we won't turn you in! No, siree! We'll give you a reward, instead! One-fourth of whatever we get. Okay, Cicero?"

"Not exactly," answered Cicero. "Since I found the brief case, I'll get the reward! So I'll give each of YOU a fourth! Okay?"
